THE FUNDING LAW.

Past Legislation and the Present Law .- A Letter from the Comptrol-

We have been permitted to copy and publish the following from the Comptroller to a Philadelphia paper:

COMPTRILLER'S OFFICE, NASHVILLE, TENN., Sep. 3, 1878.—To the Public Re-cord, Philadelphia, Penn: A copy of your issue of the 15th of Ang. has been for-warded to me, in which I find an article, marked, commenting on the funding ct of our last Legislature, and including in its comments, a circular published by me relative to the manner and matter of funding. In that article you say:

In answer to a mercantile house in this city, holding a considera le amount of [Tenn.] bonds, the Comptroller sends a printed circular which contains the following extraordinary paragraph: "The funding act does not allow may interes upon the past due bonds or coupons since their meturity."

Again you say: "What guarantee have the holders of the new funding bonds, that the interest on them will not be r pudiated in some emergency with the same facility and coolne's by the officers of the State, charged with the administration of its fi-

The whole tenor of your article is a se-vere criticism upon "the officers of the State, charged with the administration of i's finances," and especially upon the Comptroller. While I cannot admit the correctness of your reasoning on the facts befo e you, I am sure you must confess its fallacy when you have further information upon

First: The language of the Funding act is: "All the outstanding, legally issued bonds of the State of Tennessee, due, or to become due pefore Jan. 1st, 1874, as well 28 all past due coupons, and coupons maturing on or before Jan. 1st, 1874, may be funded in six per cent. coupon bonds of the State of Tennessee,"

Section 2 says: "When any of the past due bonds aforesaid are presented to the Comptroller, or when $1,000 in past due coupons are presented," they shall be fund-Nothing is said of interest on bonds past due. Under that maxim of law " he expression of the one is the exclusion of the other," "the officers of the State charged with the administration of its finances" might reasonably have concluded that the Act having expressed that the past due bonds and coupons were fundable, interest on bonds since their maturity was therefore excluded. This view is strengthenedindeed confirmed by the fact that the G vernor, lu his message to the General Assembly, in speaking of the indebtedness of the State and the proposition to fund, called particular attenti n to the matter of your disapprobation, as follows: "I recommend that you declare whether or not, the S ate shall pay interest on bonds after their mattirity, until funded. There is no legislative recognition of such liabilities by State, and the authorities ou subject are conflicting." was that recommendation responded to? Funding bills were in-Several troduced in the General Assembly.

Every one of them, I believe, had a provision authorizing the funding of interest on past due bonds after maturity. The bill which finally became the present law, had the following provision: "And all past due bonds shall bear interest at the rate of slx per cent to January, 1874, and no longer." This provison, which allows interest on past due bonds, was stricken out by a direct vote on that single proposition (See Senate Journal, page 298), and the bill, without this provision, became the law. The Legislature thus expressed its intention that interest should not be allowed on past du bonds in a manner too clear and emphatic to be disregarded by "the officers who have charge of the finances of the State. whole question was thoroughly examined and discussed by these "officers," and submitted to the Attorney General of the State for his legal opinion. He concurred that it was the evident purpose of the Legislature to not allow interest on past due bonds since maturity. The Comptroller is not the law-making power, nor is it his duty to explain or account for the motives of Legislators. It may not be improper, however, for me to refer briefly to the past legislation of the State upon the subject of funding; especially as one of the arguments by those opposed to allowing interest on bouds, or coupons, after maturity, was that the bondholder had been neglectful of their o en interest in failing to take advantage of past legislation intended for their relief and benefit.

By ac; fof Feb. 21, 1852, chap. 58, the Governor was directed to have prepared coupon bon s of the State, of $1,000 each, similar in language to the tonds previously issued without conpons, and on application the duty of the Governor, Secretary of State and Comptroller to exchange the new coupon bonds for the old bon s without the State, falling due Jan. 1, 1800, were directed to be given in exchange to those applying for bonds matured and maturing in 1868, 1868 and 1870.

You will thus see that there was, from You will thus see that there was, from Feb. 21, 1852, un'll the passage of the present funding act, a law authorising the holders of bonds without coupons, to exchange them for coupon bonds of $1,000 each, and from Sept. 5, 1868, to March 17, 1873, there was a law authorising the funding of bonds which matured in 1868, 1869 and 1870, into new coupon bonds. If the holders of bonds failed to take advantage of these acts of the General Assembly and convert their bonds as ranidly as they followed. convert their bonds as rapidly as they feil due into new compon bonds, about the funding of whose coupers there is no controvers, it is no fault of the State.

Talso call your attention to the fact that Taiso call your attention to the fact that "the naw series of funding bonds" which are being issued under the act of 1873, bear interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable, semi-annually, while of the past due bonds (less than $1,000,000 in all) the large proportion bore only five per cent interest, and the larger proportion of the remainder of those past due, here 51 per cent interest.

I k ve not entered upon a discussion of the legal or moral obligations of the State to pay interest upon post due bonds or past due coupons, because, as I have before stated, net her the Governor, Comptroller, the Secretary of State nor the Attorney General has legislative powers. All that any or all these officers can do, is to obey t'e lass as they are enacted.

If there had been any doubt about the const uction of the law, it would have been in my opinion, our duty to give the State the benefit of that doubt, because the legis-lature can give relief to individuals injured by our construction. But if we, by construction, injure the State, there is no relief to the people whose interests we are ap-pointed to guard and protect under the law as it is given to us. Respectful y, Comptroller.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

Strange State of Facts. Combined with a Mystery-Young Waggener Turns up Safe and Sound.

From the Memphis Register, Sept. 7.

Johnnie Waggener, the son of Mr. J. H. Waggener, of this city, was sent by his father, last Thursda, morning, out to collect a bili from a man who resides near the State Female College. He went to the man's house, and was informed that he (the man) was not at home, but was in the city. The b y returned and so informed his father, and was directed to to take a stand on the corner of a street, and he would shortly, no doubt, see the gentleman pass, so it would save him another trip out to the college. About eleven o'clock, Mr. Waggener went from his store, on the corner of Madison street, over to Clark's corner, where Johnnie was standing, and told him to get on the street-cor and go out to the gentleman's house agair, and try and see him. Johnnie obeyed orders, and got on a red cor, one of what is known as the Hernando street and Elmwood line. He states that he recollects getting on the red car; that there were three ladies and two men in the car, but he does not remem ber any more about the car, and don't know when, where or how he left it. He does not remember anything that occurred to, or about him from a few mitil about half after seven o'clock that n'gh' he found himself walking along a railroad track and it was dark. He concluded to walit on until he would come to a house or meet some person, so he could find out where he was, as he felt completely lost. He soon met a negro man and asked him what railroad he was on, and was informed that it was the Mississippi and Tennessee railroad. He enquired what locality he was in, and which end of the road would take him to Memphis, and was told that he was three miles south of Hernando, Mississippi, and that he was going from Memphis. He was utterly sstounded at the information, and turned and made his way on foot back to Hernando, where he arrived about halfpast eight o'clock. He got a room at the ho el and slept for the night, and after getting something to eat, went to the depot, and there asked of some person what time the train for Memphis would arrive, and understood him to reply, "at eleven o'clock." He concluded that rather than wait so long a time for the train, he would walk on to the next depot or far her, and get on it there, as he was out of money. He had not traveled far before the tain overtook and passed him. He halled and tried to stop it, but could not, so he had to walk all the way home, where he arrived about five o'clock Friday evening, and his presence gladdened the heart of an almost broken-hearted mother and father. The reporter of the Register had a long interview with Johnnie yesterday, and got a full statement of all the facts that he could give. Johnnie says that when he got on the red street car he had only ninety five cents in his pocket, and when he found himself tramping along the rairoad track, and at the hotel, he had the same amount of money, and no more, and that nothing had been taken from his person. He paid seventy-five cents for lodging at the hotel, and the balance he paid for something to eat; that he mentioned the circumstances of his not knowing when he left Memphis, nor how, to a man at the him get off the down train that evening.

John: le also states that he had no conversation with any one on the street car that he remembered, and that he had not drank anything except water since he had eaten his breakfast Thursday morning, and that he drank the water at his father's store some time before he got on the car. He is a very moral youth, fifteen years of age, quite sprightly and intelligent, has been keeping books for his father about a year, and never drinks ardent spirits. He has a good renu ation for veracity, and those who know him well give full confidence in the truthfulness of his statements about the affair. His father stated to the Register reporter that Johnnie had never been sick but once in his life, and the case was not of a nature to affect the mind, and that his mind had never been affected in any way. Taking all these circumstances and facts into view, it is the strangest affair that has ever happened in Memphis. If he went to Hernando on the train, the question is, who paid his fair, and how did he get from a red street car, which does not run to the depot of that railroad, but goes away at right angles to the street that leads to it? Our reporter has endeavored to see Hernando, and what light he can throw on the affair, if any, but failed to interview him thus far. If this should reach his eye, we hope he will send to the Register office any information or recollections he may have on the subject, as Mr. Waggener is anxious to ferret out everything connected with his son's disappearance, and if he can owed it had not paid it to him, nor seen anything of him.

Last May Mr. Folz, desiring to go to Nashville, concluded to take advantage of the excursion rate-some four dollars less than regular fare—offered by the Charleston railroad. When he a rived at the depot he found the regular ticket agent absent and a boy in the office. The boy said ne was not authorized to sell excursion tickets, and refused to let Folz have one. Just as the train was starting off the ticket agent arrived, and seeing Folz told him to go on and pay his fare, and that an excursion ticket would be forwarded to Decatur for him. When the conductor came around for the tickets, Folz tendered him $11, the price of an excursion ticket, as his fare to Nashville, at the same time repeating what of any person holding any of such bonds the ticket agent had told him. This did wi hout coupors, who desired to exchange not satisfy the offi ial, who, upon Folz reany of said bonds for the coupon bonds therein directed to be prepared, it was made train and forcibly ejected time from the car, leaving him by the wayside, all of which he thinks damaged his business prospects and general good feeling to the amount of
